Your father is a permanent resident and petitioned for your green card. But during the twelve-year waiting period, you got married and lost your eligibility. You can't get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.

Your application for asylum was denied. The judge didn't believe you'd be in danger if you were sent back to your country of origin. You can't get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.

You marry a U.S. citizen who petitions for your green card. You must complete the paper work in your country of origin & apply for a waiver (if you don't get the waiver you must wait 10 years to return since you have been in the US without documents.) Go to Country of Origin & roll the dice. If you get an even number, go right to the Path to Citizenship Start, if an odd number, wait three turns. (the 10-year penalty) and go the Path to Citizenship Start.

You went to a notary who said they could help you apply for a green card. You thought they were qualified to do this, but they messed up the paperwork. The government deports you. Go to the country of origin space and stay there until you roll an even number. Then,

Return to the Limbo Loop

There is no kind of immigrant visa that you can qualify for - you cannot get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.

There is no kind of immigrant visa that you can qualify for - you cannot get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.

There is no kind of immigrant visa that you can qualify for - you cannot get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.

There is no kind of immigrant visa that you can qualify for - you cannot get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.

There is no kind of immigrant visa that you can qualify for - you cannot get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.

There is no kind of immigrant visa that you can qualify for - you cannot get a green card.

Continue on the Limbo Loop.